Voice Carry-Over Relay

Making your life easier...one call at a time.

There are times when making a telephone call is one of the last things we want to do on a given day—for many reasons. When the reasons include frustration, humiliation, and sadness, making that call (or answering a call) are never at the top of the favorite-things-to-do list.

Frustration, humiliation, and sadness were just a few of the feelings experienced by a woman who lives in Eastern New York State—feelings she experienced until she was introduced to New York Relay's Voice Carry-Over (VCO) service.

The VCO service allows a deaf or hard-of-hearing person to speak directly to a hearing person. The Relay Operator types exactly what the hearing person says and the deaf or hard-of-hearing person can read it on their TTY or VCO phone. This has proven to be a perfect communication solution for late-deafened adults who have difficulty hearing over the phone.

"The 7-1-1 line and the VCO phone has been a godsend for me," Eleanor Varden recently stated. "Using 7-1-1 has restored my self-confidence and dignity."

Mrs. Varden, 91, began experiencing hearing loss when she was in her 50s. Over the years she has used hearing aids and amplifiers to assist her with using the telephone. As her hearing loss became greater, those devices were not working for her and telephone calls had become her nemesis. In March of this year, Sandra Clark, Executive Director for the Association of the Hearing Impaired and New York Relay Ambassador for the Albany area and Eastern New York State, introduced Mrs. Varden to the VCO phone and instructed her on its use. A relationship was born!

Mrs. Varden now uses the VCO phone on a daily basis—speaking with businesses, making appointments, visiting with her son and her friends.

"The tenseness just rolled off my shoulders the first time I completed a VCO call on my own," Mrs. Varden recalls. "And the 7-1-1 Operators are just wonderful."

The Voice Carry-Over service may very well be the perfect solution for you or someone you know. In the words of Eleanor Varden, "It has been a lifesaver. I love it!"

Relaying Information, from me to you!

Being deaf, hard-of-hearing, or speech-disabled is a very different experience today as compared to 15 years ago—or even 2 years ago. Technology is changing our world so quickly that it is almost (but not quite!) impossible to keep up.

I have met many people who still do not know all that technology can do for them. In this issue, we are introducing a “Did You Know?” column. We want to share information about what we have available to us to make access possible. For example, did you know that Caller ID can make your life much easier? Knowing who is calling you before you answer the phone is a great advantage. I like it because I often get the name and phone number of the person on my Caller ID box, and I don’t have to worry about writing down the phone number. New York Relay provides Caller ID through relay calls, and there is no indication that the call is a relay call. It is functionally equivalent, and this is what we strive for. Contact your local telephone company for more information about Caller ID. Additional charges do apply.

Did you know that any time you see “CC” it means closed captions are provided? If you are not able to hear or understand what is on television, look for the CC button on your remote control. Follow the directions and turn on closed captions.

The advent of captioned telephone (see adjacent article) is opening still more doors for better communication. Something important to all of us.

If you have a technology tip you want to share, write and tell us about it.

Until next time, make the most of every day!

New Yorkers Welcome Captioned Telephone Service

The New York State Public Service Commission has recently announced that beginning in January 2007 captioned telephone service will be available to New Yorkers through New York Relay Service.

Captioned telephone service uses a telephone that displays near real-time captions of the telephone conversation. The captions are displayed on a screen imbedded into the telephone base. The service is similar to closed-captioning on television or subtitles on movies.

The newly available captioned telephone service will complement the existing services provided by New York Relay—services that are renowned for making telephone connections for hearing, deaf, hard-of-hearing, deaf-blind, speech-disabled, and late-deafened individuals!

For more information how captioned telephones can be available to you, be sure to visit our website nyrelay.com. More details coming in our next newsletter!

New York Relay Service Has a Visual Presence in NYC

A visit to the New York City Subway System will bring you up close and personal to a 4' x 5' billboard advertisement for New York Relay Services. New York Relay's 205 billboards are visible from the Brooklyn Bridge station, to Rockefeller Center to Prospect Park and 51 other locations in between!

As part of New York Relay's efforts to educate all New Yorkers about New York Relay, this eye-catching ad is asking the hearing community if they have an awareness of New York Relay.

In addition to the subway ads, New York Relay has placed similar print ads in thousands of penny-saver publications throughout the State.

The word is out. Everyone can benefit from New York Relay!
